Raymond To Mark Provincial Anniversary Sat, Sept. 3

Raymond will mark the Golden Jubilee of the Province of Alberta on Saturday, September 3, instead of on Thursday but the change in days will not dampen the enthusiasm of the celebration.

A committee has been working on plans for the day that will start at one o'clock when the Hon. Gordon E. Taylor, Minister of Highways and telephones and the Hon. Leonard C. Halmrast, Minister of Agriculture, as well as other officials will gather at the intersection of Broadway and the Highway for the official opening of both roads. Also to be declared officially in use at that time will be the Canadian Western Natural Gas system and new mercury-vapor street lights recently installed on Broadway by Calgary Power.

After the official ceremony the crowd will be invited to attend the Rodeo at the Stampede Grounds.

In the evening all those interested in dancing will have plenty of opportunity to get in their licks when two separate dances will be held on main street. At one end Gordon Dudley will be in charge of a square dance and at the other end Jack Patey and his orchestra will provide the music for modern dancing. There's fun in store for everyone.

About 1:30 Tuesday afternoon, the Fire Dept. was called to the Jim Bridge home, where the children, who had been burning garbage, had allowed the fire to escape into the dry foxtail and brush. Fortunately the fire wasn't very extensive.

Mrs. Emma Dahl returned Friday from her stay at Camp Mother at Camp T-La-Da in Waterton. Also directing the 28 second year Beehive girls were Mrs. Scott Salmon and Mrs. Alma Hancock.

The Fourth Ward Mutual sponsored a boating party at Alkali Lake, Thursday night. About 100 people came to take part in thrilling boat riding, water skiing, surf-board riding and swimming; the Mutual furnished everyone with all the scrumptious food they could eat. A few of the braver older girls swam across the lake where the boats were to pick them up and bring them back. (There were seven boats busy on the lake.) That the girls were forgotten until the lunch was almost over didn't daunt their spirits at all. Mildred Fawns took charge of the sports and Gordon Cooper, assisted by Jim Bridge supervised the campfire program.

Adventures At The Girls Home

On arrival at camp it was sunny and clear, We were met at the door by "Mary" the deer, A note on the door made us all nearly faint It said, "Start the dinner for a large group of Saints".

So Idale and Beth, Libbe, Retta and Tillie, Started the dinner, 'twas really a dilly, Mary, a real little diamond named Stone, Brought a car full of ladies to the Te-La-Da Home.

LaVaun, Ruth, Rolfsen "twins" and Irene A happier gang you never have seen. They pitched in and worked, their stomachs to fill While those Saints were at Red Rock climbing the hill.

There was Dorothy, Virginia, Jenny, Inez and Dick, With Jean Kimball Whitney, California's high kick. The incoming cars brought Jensen's wee tribe, Dad took them home when Irene gave a bribe.

We cheered the sweet faces all happy and bright, And Irene waved goodbye with a Mother's delight. Velma and Kay made a very short stay They had to leave for LeVeda's wedding today.

We dipped in the lake, 'twas icy and cold But "Oh, so refreshing", said Clara the bold; But Beth and Idale's loud shrieks and squeals Made the rest of us take to our heels.

The last but not least of them all to arrive Were Camp Mother Martha with Ruth by her side, Gladys Stringam and Ella Hancock they Were the ones who caused the shameful delay.

Lucille and Laura, bless their hearts for this eve, They furnished the music as we danced as we pleased. Hirsche can't sing but how she can clap To the rythm of music, if you call it that.

Now the story is longer, much longer you see, 'Cause Ruth made a bonfire out under the trees, She led us in song, in melody sweet, 'Till Camp Mother said, "Now girls we must sleep".

We meant to obey and started right there When 'round the corner came a big brown bear, An unmerciful scream was chorused by all, In the scramble that followed Ellen took a great sprawl.

We finally unmasked that troublesome bear And justly decided right then and there To bar from this camp Idale, Beth and Dick In the coming year of 1956.

MEMORY

One evening a small congenial group was engaged in exchanging pleasantries about its hobbies. After each person had extolled the merits of his hobby, a shy little woman was asked what hers was. "Mine," she exclaimed, "is collecting memories." Collecting memories! What an art! But these hobbies cannot be collected like old glass; they are made by what we do for others. It is the imperishable wealth of memories that becomes the only food that sustains our lives. God pity the person without a rosary of memories, with nothing to companion the soul on its lonely way. And, then, just suppose that memory survives the wreck of death. What a ghastly nightmare to spend eternity without the benediction of a sustaining memory. Ah yes, money may be lost, friends may forsake, and health fail, but golden memories remain to bless our pilgrim day as we travel westward, not toward a darkening sunset, but out toward the shining dawn!

LaRita, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Deral West visited on her day off, Monday, from the Snack Bar in Waterton, with her parents in Raymond.

IMAGINATION

It is an enchanted moment when, after days and years of fog-bound existence, suddenly there floods in upon us a knowledge which sets our restless hearts at peace. That moment may come while we are fulfilling our daily round of common duties; or while we are re-thinking the thoughts some great soul has left the world; or while we stand, hushed to prayer, before the glory of a midnight sky; or while our nostrils are stung by foamy whiffs from a new-made grave. Suddenly, the universe spills its eternal meaning. In a flash we find ourselves beholding the naked, quivering heart of reality. Thereafter our lives are changed. We go about as one who had imagined that life was an idiot's tale, and now has found it to be a Hallelujah chorus. Varied as our several quests may be, each makes his discovery according to the measure of the best he envisions.

SWEEPING COMPOUND

The following sweeping compound helps to keep garage and workshop floors spick and span with a minimum of time and energy expended.

Into 1 pint of paraffin oil, mix well 4 ounces of melted paraffin. Combine the liquid with 1 pound of coarse salt and 8 pounds of clean, fine sand. Then distribute evenly into 20 pounds of clean, dry sawdust.

When sprinkled over the floor before sweeping, this compound picks up dirt, dust and sand, and a certain amount of grease and oil. For large oil and grease spots, dilute and soften them with kerosene or benzine, and cover with a liberal quantity of the sweeping compound, allowing time for it to absorb the grease and oil.

When the meat grinder requires oiling use a drop or two of glycerine. This will prevent any disagreeable taste or smell and will act as a lubricant.

En route from Neepawa Manitoba to North Vancouver Mr. and Mrs. Norman Wells, Kay and Karen made a 3-day return visit at the homes of Ray Atwoods and the Albert Zobells.

Sam

In San Francisco lived a man, rich in money, rich in intellect - a business man with many and varied interests. With him lived his Chinese servant, Sam. Sam and his master had been together for fifteen years, and always the best of friends.

Sam knew his employer as though he were his other self. No orders were necessary. If there was to be company Sam provided for them well. No unwished-for visitor ever got to the master to rob him of his rest. When the rich man awakened in the morning, it was to the singing of a tiny music box that Sam had brought from China. The bath ready; clean garments placed handily; the right pair of shoes polished to a mirror, and on the mantel a rose, still dewy, for a boutonniere.

Breakfast, hot and savory, waited. Silent as a shadow Sam would stand in the hallway with overcoat, hat, and cane. When the weather was threatening, an umbrella was substituted for the cane. At night the door swung wide.

Sam never took a vacation; he seemed not to either eat or sleep. He was always near when needed; he disappeared when he should. He knew nothing and he knew everything. For weeks scarcely a word might pass between these men - they understood each other so well.

But one morning as Sam poured his master's coffee, he said quietly, without a shade of emotion on his yellow face, 'Next week I leave you. I go away.'

The man smiled, but hardly looked up. 'Next week I leave you,' repeated the Chinese, 'I hire for you better man.'

The rich man set down his cup of coffee. He looked at the white-robed servant. Then he spoke. 'So you are going to leave me - I do not pay you enough, eh? That Doctor Sanders who was here - he knows what a treasure you are. Don't be a fool, Sam; I'll pay you more money - say no more. Next week I leave you - I go to China.'

'Oh, I see! You are going back for a wife? All right bring her here - you will return in two months? I do not object. I'll see the Collector of the Port myself and arrange your passage papers.'

'I go to China next week. I need no papers - I never come back,' was the reply with exasperating calmness.

'By the Gods, you shall not go!' shouted the man.

'By the Gods, I will!' answered the Chinese.

It was the first time the men had used such tones. The rich man pushed back his chair, and after an instant, said quietly, 'Sam, you must forgive me; I spoke quickly. I do not own you - but tell me, what have I done - why do you leave me this way - you know I need you!'

'I will not tell you why I go - you laugh.'

No, I shall not laugh.'

'You will.'

'I say, I will not.'

'Well, I will tell you; I go to China to die!'

'Nonsense! You can die here. Have not I agreed to send your body back if you die before I do?'

'I die in four weeks, two days!'

'What?'

'My brother, he is in prison. He young twenty-six, I fifty. He have family and baby. In China they take any man same family to die. I go to China, give my money to my brother - he live, I die!'

Next day a new Chinese appeared as servant in the man's household. In a week, this servant knew everything, and nothing, just as Sam had. And Sam disappeared, without saying goodbye.

Four weeks and two days from the day he broke the news of his intent to go, his brother was set free.

And the rich man's household goes along about as usual, save when the master calls for 'Sam' when he should say 'Charlie'. And at such times there comes a kind of clutch at his heart but he says nothing.

NEW WINE IN OLD BOTTLES: The parable about new wine in old bottles can be applied, among many other things, to the storage of new grain in old granaries in poor repair. For new grain going into a granary for storage which is infested with mites and insects from last year, stands no more chance for healthy storage than did the wine in the parable, according to Mr. William Lobay, Alberta's supervisor of Pest Control.

Mr. Lobay goes on to point out that moisture is another menace to stored grain. The grain will heat and go out of condition. The repair of present buildings must be carefully checked for leaks, roofs, doors, or other spots where snow or rain might enter. Weather proof ventilators should be installed on all buildings used for temporary or permanent storage. Grain normally 'sweats' and this moisture must be removed from the buildings.

Granaries must be re-conditioned to prevent grain lodging in cracks. The walls and floors, advises Mr. Lobay, should be thoroughly cleaned and sprayed with a 1% lindane solution. If old infested grain is covered with new grain the infestation will spread throughout the pile.

A granary with a wooden floor, well above the ground, is the best for grain storage. There should be a thorough clean up of discarded and spilled grain around the storage places. Accumulations of mouldy grain are favorite breeding places for grain beetles and mites.

Mr. Lobay puts forward recommendations from a special meeting on grain storage in a mimeographed bulletin entitled 'Grain Storage on the Farm' which may be had by writing Mr. Lobay in care of the Alberta Department of Agriculture, Edmonton.

MAN'S CASTLE

We should be thankful for our homes; comfortable homes! - Our happiness there is not dependent on the brilliancy of the wall-paper, or the beauty of the chandeliers. Our homes are our 'castles of refuge' from the conflicts and turmoils of our daily life in the world. Praise God, day and night for a good comfortable home.

During the jubilees, flounder, crab, and shrimp rush to the beach by the thousands and are scooped up by the washtub load.

The phenomena, which occurs only along the shore of Mobile Bay, is believed to result when fresh water from the rivers mixes with the salt water from the gulf stream in a certain proportion.

Mr. and Mrs. Fay Walker and family and Mrs. Fanny Walker left last week-end for Moses Lake Washington to visit with Mrs. Walker's son, Reed.

A four-year-old had crossed the boundary line between United States and Canada for the first time and apparently had been intrigued with the several cars in the expedition. In telling me about it later she said, 'You know, you have to get a PERMANENT for the car when you cross.'

ICELESS FOOD COOLER

When away from civilization's modern conveniences, keeping milk, butter, and other perishables from going sour or rancid is something of a problem. Lakes normally warm up during the hot months, and the cool brook may be a long hike from the campsite.

Bring along a large earthenware bowl, or preferably a large earthenware crock. In a little water, dissolve one cake of ordinary washing blue. Add more water to the mixture until a bottle of milk is standing halfway deep. Butter should be placed in a covered bowl or jar. Remember to change the solution once a week, and it will keep stuff cold on the hottest days.

From Tuesday to Saturday of last week, Mr. and Mrs. D. S. Bigelow and 5 children of Vancouver visited with Mr. and Mrs. Rayo Woolf. Mr. Bigelow is a brother of Mrs. Woolf's.
